Want 'Green' Products? Check These Out

By Chad Roberts

Good morning! I went to the Go Green Expo in Los Angeles in January. There were so many great "green" vendors. I saw so many products I did not know existed.

For the next few weeks I will tell you about some of them.

Let's start with my mom's favorite, the Bayes waterless carwash, recommended by Ed Begley Jr., who has a show on the TV channel Planetgreen. The waterless carwash saves over 1,500 gallons of water per month. Bayes has lots of great products, including stainless-steel cleaner that will make you like cleaning your stainless steel. Check out www.bayescleaners.com to see them all. All the products smell good! My mom says she will never wash the car with a hose again. We also liked the pet odor and stain remover.

I got to meet Ed Begley Jr., an actor/activist just like me. He has a terrific all-purpose cleaner that is 100 percent plant-based, nontoxic and biodegradable. Go on his site, www.begleysbest.com, to check out all his products. Also, you can watch his show and get great green ideas.

I found the most portable refillable water bottle on the planet. It is foldable, attachable to a backpack or lunchbox, freezable and top-rack-safe. Check out www.vapur.us to see how cool it is. It's soon to be sold at Amazon.com and Target.

Www.OrganicKidz.ca has stainless-steel baby bottles that can be changed to a sippy cup and a sports bottle. The company is family-owned – really nice people. The bottle is lightweight, unbreakable and dent-resistant, keeps liquids hot or cold for five to six hours, and has cool designs. Consider these over plastic water bottles.
