Green Go-Getter

The Go Green Expo is saving the ozone layer one sustainable step at a time.

BY LAXMI RODULFO

After hearing so much about the deterioration of the ozone layer, one event is here to help: the Go Green Expo, back for the third consecutive year (March 9 to 21) has more than 200 company booths showcasing green products and services and the Architectural Digest Home Design Show. From interactive seminars to a green Kids Zone, this gathering motivates even the youngest of crowds to go green. For those interested in learning about how to live a greener life, environmentally conscious celebrities like Mariel Hemingway, Matthew Modine and Ed Begley Jr. will address topics throughout the exhibition. Special guest Robin Wilson—an eco-friendly interior designer from New York, known for working on President Bill Clinton's Harlem office and Robert F. Kennedy Jr.'s home—will also speak. If you don't come out of this one inspired to live a more sustainable lifestyle, we're not sure what would get the job done. Pier 92 and Pier 94, 12th Ave. at W. 55th St., 646-778-3211
